Program Specific Outcomes

PSO1. Accustom to the library as a social institution for knowledge generation, creation and dissemination.

PSO2. Understanding of the philosophical and social foundations of Library and Information Centers.

PSO3. students will be ready to play an active role in associations and engage in other professional activities, as well as understand the importance of cooperation among libraries and information professionals and their agencies

PSO4. To acquaint with the conceptual foundation of library classification and library cataloging as the base for knowledge organization.

PSO5. Understand the functions of librarians and information specialists within the larger global societal framework, and the factors influencing the creation, dissemination, and use of knowledge and information and the responsibility to serve all client groups.

PSO6. Able to analyze and synthesize the concepts of knowledge, information, and communication; and to critically examine, assess, and make recommendations as to how these concepts and principles are applied in various information environments.

PSO7. Understand current information technology as an integral part of the operations and services of libraries and information agencies.

PSO8. Overview of the different categories of references and information tools to choose an appropriate source for meeting reference queries.

PSO9. Explain the criteria for evaluation of reference and information sources (Both online and offline).

PSO10. Understanding of Management concepts, theory, principles, and practice in Library & information Centers.

PSO11. Enable students to become effective library/Information managers.

PSO12. Explain and use the techniques of Classifying Documents according to Dewey's Decimal Classification Schemes and Colon Classification Schemes (Latest available edition).

PSO13. Explain the procedures involved in the cataloging of documents according to AACR-2R and CCC.

PSO14. Knowing various types of Information Retrieval Systems; their characteristics, evaluation, performance and models.

PSO15. Accustom to various tools, techniques, and systems of ISAR.

PSO16. Basic concepts and components of a computer, telecommunication, and networking, software tools and database management systems useful for information management.

PSO17. Practical knowledge of different operating systems, word processors, spreadsheets, presentations and developing skills to access internet resources.

PSO18. Conduct effective searches to locate, evaluate, analyze, and synthesize information sources, with respect for the culturally diverse composition of society and its information needs.