

Programme Outcomes (MRS)

The objectives of a Master's program in Rural Studies typically encompass a variety of academic, practical, and developmental goals aimed at understanding and addressing the unique challenges faced by rural areas. Below are some common objectives of such programs:

- Comprehensive Understanding: To provide students with a thorough understanding of rural societies, economies, and environments.
- Interdisciplinary Approach: To integrate knowledge from various disciplines such as sociology, economics, geography, environmental science, and public policy to study rural areas.
- Theoretical Foundations: To familiarize students with the theoretical frameworks and concepts related to rural development and sustainability.